IV. WRITING (10 points)

One unusual lesson.

This was a common day of summer. I was sitting near the book and read a tale. I don't remember the name of this story, but I know the author of it – Ivan Turgenev.

The story was about a young woman called Lukerya. She was happy, having a bright life; but the life can turn bad, as we know. One night, Lukerya went to the stairs of her home, because she wanted to meet with her future husband, but fell off the stairs. She didn't know what's happened, and then her health was being worse. She couldn't walk and just sit, so she lay down. But Lukerya was lot of happiness, she didn't cry about her life, which was insane and hard.

I had strong feelings. Besides, I don't hear at right side, but I usually think "why it's me, but don't others". From that moment, I decided: "I won't cry about my life and my health, because there are people that have worse situation than me. And so do I now."
